

Lloyd was born in 1929 in Donalda Alberta where he attended the Beuna Vista School.

His childhood was spent farming land, mainly by hand and helping others in the Donalda area with their farms during the war.

In 1945 he left Alberta and moved to BC to start working in the logging industry. In 1952 Lloyd married Lillian and in 1954 started raising his family in Maple Ridge BC.

Lloyd also started working for the federal correctional system. He was tasked with the new program of building campgrounds and provincial parks including building roads and bridges through rugged terrain. One of the bigger shining jewels of his park development in BC during this time was the development of Garibaldi Park and Alouette Lake recreational areas.

In 1966 Lloyd took a position as a correctional officer in the Northwest Territories. He continued to develop campgrounds through his years working in Corrections. Later, he became the Director for the Translating & Interpreter Corps even having a chance to visit the United Nations.

In 1976 he moved back to Alberta and took a job with the Village of Alix as the Recreational Director/Weed Inspector/Development Officer/Town Operations Superintendent. During his time working at the Village of Alix he developed and redesigned many parks and playgrounds around the community. He also developed the Alix Lake Campground and the Haunted Lake Campground north of Alix.
